Laura-Julie Perreault is a staff reporter who covers international affairs for Le Soleil, for the. She works from Austin, Texas. Her stories have appeared in The Washington Post, The Chronicle of Higher Education, and others about Iraq, and is working on a book about the dragging death of James Byrd, Jr., which was chosen as one of The Washington Post’s Best Books of 2002 and won the Barnes & Noble Discover Award. She has reported from nearly 50 countries, most recently Iraq and Pakistan.

Jeffrey R. Young is an editor and writer for The Chronicle of Higher Education. He has covered the intersection of technology and education for more than 15 years. His articles have appeared in New York Times, The Wall Street Journal and New Scientist, and one of his pieces was selected for “The Best of Technology Writing 2007.” Young also co-edited the book, “Robothing the Academy: 12 Tech Innovators Who Are Transforming Campuses.” He teaches multimedia journalism at the University of Maryland at College Park and is a 2014 Nieman-Berkman Fellow in Journalism Innovation.
MESSAGE FROM THE CURATOR

ANN MARIE LIPINSKI

When Agnes Wahl Nieman endowed the Nieman Foundation for Journalism, she requested that it “promote and elevate the standards of journalism and educate persons deemed specially qualified for journalism work.” With simple and elegant intent, so began the fellowship program that for 76 years has invited a group of accomplished and promising journalists for a year of study at Harvard. What started as a fellowship for U.S. journalists eventually expanded to include international candidates who bring their skills and wisdom from across the globe. The fellows come with study plans designed to enhance their expertise and return them to their news organizations better prepared to understand and interpret a complex world. In addition to their academic studies, the fellows attend Nieman Foundation seminars, master classes and conferences that fortify their ability to lead and innovate.

While at Harvard, the fellows also serve as campus resources through a variety of collaborations. Recent fellows have co-authored papers with faculty, led seminars, given classroom lectures and served as mentors to students. The experience found in this year’s class of fellows represents an important asset to the Harvard community and beyond.

On behalf of former fellows, I extend my gratitude to those faculty, and others who have been so generous with their time and expertise over the many years of this program. You have advanced the work of the Nieman Foundation seminars, master classes and conferences that fortify their ability to lead and innovate.

And so, on behalf of the Nieman Foundation for Journalism, I extend my gratitude to the U.N. Correspondents Association, The Beast TV, the Philadelphia Water Institute, the U.S. military occupation of Iraq, the U.S. military occupation of Afghanistan, and the U.S. military occupation of southern Africa. And thank you in advance for your support of the Nieman class of 2014.

The Nieman Foundation for Journalism at Harvard educates leaders in journalism and elevates the standards of the profession through special programs that convene scholars and experts from around the world. More than 1,400 accomplished and promising journalists from 92 countries have been awarded Nieman Fellowships since 1938. The foundation’s other initiatives include Nieman Lab, a website that reports on the future of news, innovation and best practices in the digital media age; and Nieman Storyboard, a website that showcases exceptional narrative journalism and explores the future of nonfiction storytelling.

MESSAGE FROM THE CURATOR

ANN MARIE LIPINSKI

When Agnes Wahl Nieman endowed the Nieman Foundation for Journalism, she requested that it “promote and elevate the standards of journalism and educate persons deemed specially qualified for journalism work.” With simple and elegant intent, so began the fellowship program that for 76 years has invited a group of accomplished and promising journalists for a year of study at Harvard. What started as a fellowship for U.S. journalists eventually expanded to include international candidates who bring their skills and wisdom from across the globe. The fellows come with study plans designed to enhance their expertise and return them to their news organizations better prepared to understand and interpret a complex world. In addition to their academic studies, the fellows attend Nieman Foundation seminars, master classes and conferences that fortify their ability to lead and innovate.

While at Harvard, the fellows also serve as campus resources through a variety of collaborations. Recent fellows have co-authored papers with faculty, led seminars, given classroom lectures and served as mentors to students. The experience found in this year’s class of fellows represents an important asset to the Harvard community and beyond.

On behalf of former fellows, I extend my gratitude to those faculty, and others who have been so generous with their time and expertise over the many years of this program. You have advanced the work of the Nieman Foundation seminars, master classes and conferences that fortify their ability to lead and innovate.

And so, on behalf of the Nieman Foundation for Journalism, I extend my gratitude to the U.N. Correspondents Association, The Beast TV, the Philadelphia Water Institute, the U.S. military occupation of Iraq, the U.S. military occupation of Afghanistan, and the U.S. military occupation of southern Africa. And thank you in advance for your support of the Nieman class of 2014.

The Nieman Foundation for Journalism at Harvard educates leaders in journalism and elevates the standards of the profession through special programs that convene scholars and experts from around the world. More than 1,400 accomplished and promising journalists from 92 countries have been awarded Nieman Fellowships since 1938. The foundation’s other initiatives include Nieman Lab, a website that reports on the future of news, innovation and best practices in the digital media age; and Nieman Storyboard, a website that showcases exceptional narrative journalism and explores the future of nonfiction storytelling.

MESSAGE FROM THE CURATOR

Ann Marie Lipinski

The Nieman Foundation for Journalism at Harvard educates leaders in journalism and elevates the standards of the profession through special programs that convene scholars and experts from around the world. More than 1,400 accomplished and promising journalists from 92 countries have been awarded Nieman Fellowships since 1938. The foundation’s other initiatives include Nieman Lab, a website that reports on the future of news, innovation and best practices in the digital media age; and Nieman Storyboard, a website that showcases exceptional narrative journalism and explores the future of nonfiction storytelling.

MESSAGE FROM THE CURATOR

ANN MARIE LIPINSKI

When Agnes Wahl Nieman endowed the Nieman Foundation for Journalism, she requested that it “promote and elevate the standards of journalism and educate persons deemed specially qualified for journalism work.” With simple and elegant intent, so began the fellowship program that for 76 years has invited a group of accomplished and promising journalists for a year of study at Harvard. What started as a fellowship for U.S. journalists eventually expanded to include international candidates who bring their skills and wisdom from across the globe. The fellows come with study plans designed to enhance their expertise and return them to their news organizations better prepared to understand and interpret a complex world. In addition to their academic studies, the fellows attend Nieman Foundation seminars, master classes and conferences that fortify their ability to lead and innovate.

While at Harvard, the fellows also serve as campus resources through a variety of collaborations. Recent fellows have co-authored papers with faculty, led seminars, given classroom lectures and served as mentors to students. The experience found in this year’s class of fellows represents an important asset to the Harvard community and beyond.

On behalf of former fellows, I extend my gratitude to those faculty, and others who have been so generous with their time and expertise over the many years of this program. You have advanced the work of the Nieman Foundation seminars, master classes and conferences that fortify their ability to lead and innovate.

And so, on behalf of the Nieman Foundation for Journalism, I extend my gratitude to the U.N. Correspondents Association, The Beast TV, the Philadelphia Water Institute, the U.S. military occupation of Iraq, the U.S. military occupation of Afghanistan, and the U.S. military occupation of southern Africa. And thank you in advance for your support of the Nieman class of 2014.

The Nieman Foundation for Journalism at Harvard educates leaders in journalism and elevates the standards of the profession through special programs that convene scholars and experts from around the world. More than 1,400 accomplished and promising journalists from 92 countries have been awarded Nieman Fellowships since 1938. The foundation’s other initiatives include Nieman Lab, a website that reports on the future of news, innovation and best practices in the digital media age; and Nieman Storyboard, a website that showcases exceptional narrative journalism and explores the future of nonfiction storytelling.

MESSAGE FROM THE CURATOR

Ann Marie Lipinski

The Nieman Foundation for Journalism at Harvard educates leaders in journalism and elevates the standards of the profession through special programs that convene scholars and experts from around the world. More than 1,400 accomplished and promising journalists from 92 countries have been awarded Nieman Fellowships since 1938. The foundation’s other initiatives include Nieman Lab, a website that reports on the future of news, innovation and best practices in the digital media age; and Nieman Storyboard, a website that showcases exceptional narrative journalism and explores the future of nonfiction storytelling.

MESSAGE FROM THE CURATOR

Ann Marie Lipinski

The Nieman Foundation for Journalism at Harvard educates leaders in journalism and elevates the standards of the profession through special programs that convene scholars and experts from around the world. More than 1,400 accomplished and promising journalists from 92 countries have been awarded Nieman Fellowships since 1938. The foundation’s other initiatives include Nieman Lab, a website that reports on the future of news, innovation and best practices in the digital media age; and Nieman Storyboard, a website that showcases exceptional narrative journalism and explores the future of nonfiction storytelling.

MESSAGE FROM THE CURATOR

Ann Marie Lipinski

The Nieman Foundation for Journalism at Harvard educates leaders in journalism and elevates the standards of the profession through special programs that convene scholars and experts from around the world. More than 1,400 accomplished and promising journalists from 92 countries have been awarded Nieman Fellowships since 1938. The foundation’s other initiatives include Nieman Lab, a website that reports on the future of news, innovation and best practices in the digital media age; and Nieman Storyboard, a website that showcases exceptional narrative journalism and explores the future of nonfiction storytelling.

MESSAGE FROM THE CURATOR

Ann Marie Lipinski

The Nieman Foundation for Journalism at Harvard educates leaders in journalism and elevates the standards of the profession through special programs that convene scholars and experts from around the world. More than 1,400 accomplished and promising journalists from 92 countries have been awarded Nieman Fellowships since 1938. The foundation’s other initiatives include Nieman Lab, a website that reports on the future of news, innovation and best practices in the digital media age; and Nieman Storyboard, a website that showcases exceptional narrative journalism and explores the future of nonfiction storytelling.